Very likely it's just waiting for a volunteer to contribute patches that add it back, porting it GTK+ 3 or even Audacious Preferences UI API.

Hi all.

I've been missing modplug preferences too. Googling around brought me here, and I found out that preferences is not a priority.
So, here's my small contribution - patch that adds preferences page to modplug plugin.
It's implemented in terms of Audacious Preferences UI API, and I tried to keep its look as close as possible to old page.

Any chances that it will be accepted?

Hi Vladimir, I've committed an adapted version of your patch:
https://github.com/audacious-media-player/audacious-plugins/commit/55b332ef8c97852fd6fa3b4b4a5cf0cdc0638ee6

Thank you for the contribution; I'm sure it will make a lot of modplug users happy.

Just to double-check: are you okay with this code entering the public domain (since that's how the rest of the plugin is licensed)?

#6 - April 20, 2013 07:44 - Vladimir Strakh

Going public domain is absolutely ok :)
thx.
