Description
It would be nice to have a setting where it is possible to change how the song's length is displayed in the playlist editor. Eg. if I have a song that is 2 hours long, it is displayed in the playlist editor as 2:00:00. It would be nice to be able to display it as 120:00. One can implement it maybe by having a text box with the syntax of the format eg. hh:mm:ss as default and if we change it to mm:ss then we get the desired outcome as described above. PS in the "playback area window" the current time is already shown as minutes so instead of displaying 2:00:00 (as it is in the playlist editor) it shows 120:00.

Are you sure you're using 3.7.2? All the displayed time formats should be consistent since 3.6.x, since they all call `str_format_time()`.

Yes, I am using 3.7.2 on Ubuntu 14.04. If I understood you correctly there is no way to implement have I have asked?

I have never said that in the previous versions this was implemented.

I attach a screenshot that demonstrates my problem. (in the playlist the track is 1:12:46 long while in the player it shows 69:12 after passing the hour mark instead of 1:09:12). What I would like is that 72:46 is shown in the playlist editor.

Oh, you're using the skinned interface. That makes more sense now.
