Windows startup shaded window issue is back

September 11, 2017 09:48 - Davyd McColl

Description
This is an issue which was a problem quite some time back and seems to have reared its head again: when starting up Audacious on Windows, using the WinAmp-style interface, shaded windows start off with a section underneath them which is grey. Unshading and reshading makes this go away.

It's possible that I omitted the patch for this when I updated the GTK+ DLLs. I will check later this week.

- Status changed from New to Closed

- % Done changed from 0 to 100

That was it. New Windows builds ("3.9a") are on the Downloads page.
