Audacious - OLD, PLEASE USE GITHUB DISCUSSIONS/ISSUES - Feature #886

Add preference to disable song info popup

April 23, 2019 14:05 - Doug Vetter

Status:	Rejected		Start date:	April 23, 2019
Priority:	Minor		Due date:
Assignee:			% Done:	0%
Category:	win32		Estimated time:	0.00 hour
Target version:
Affects version:	3.10.1

Description

At some point Audacious added a "feature" where if you hover over a song in the playlist a popup window appears to display the details of the song, the album art, etc.

I find this visually annoying and irritating because it blocks a significant portion of the playlist and provides details I did not specifically request. If I want more information about a song I'll right click it and select "Song Info".

FYI, one of the other annoying aspects to this popup is that as I move my mouse over a variety of windows, particularly on the Windows desktop (as I use Audacious on both Linux and Windows), the popup remains persistent when the focus is clearly another application. This is probably a Windows bug but still quite annoying. I have to hover the mouse in the vicinity of the popup, which is now blocking my other application window, to eliminate it.

Please either remove this redundant "feature" (Song Info works well enough for this purpose) or provide a preference to disable it.

History

#1 - April 23, 2019 15:15 - John Lindgren

- Status changed from New to Rejected

You should always ask on the forum to see if a particular feature exists already before requesting it.

This preference has existed for years:
File -> Settings -> Song Info -> Popup Information -> Show popup information

Files

audacious_popup.png	94.2 KB	April 23, 2019	Doug Vetter